Martin Bruinsma What We Saw

Martin Bruinsma, 2016, The Divine, acrylic on wood panel, 12" x 12"

In his new series, "What We Saw", Martin Bruinsma depicts images of both feathers and vessels. They had, at one time, been aloft and integrated members of a greater whole.

From their unique vantage point they were silent witnesses to the many wonders of the world, as well as our hopes, our dreams and sorrows. Now adrift and apart, they are the holders of memories. Delicate and subject to the effects of time, they float, shift and will eventually fade away.

His paintings depict views as if seen through a pinhole camera accentuating the soft-focus nature of recollections.

This show is dedicated to his mother, Irene, who is suffering from debilitating dementia after a life filled with love and worldwide adventures.
